A Picture.

BY JOAQUIN MILLER.

Once more by morn, when snows mountains flamed
With sudden shafts of light that shot a flood
Into the vale, like fiery arrows aimed
At night from mighty battlements, there stood
Upon a cliff high-limned against Mount Hood,
A matchless bull fresh forth from sable wold,
And, standing so, seemed grander 'gainst the wood
Than winged bull that stood with tips of gold
Beside the brazen gates of Babylon of old.

A time he tossed the dewy turf, and then
Stretched forth his wrinkled neck, and long and loud
He called above the far abodes of men
Until his breath became a curling cloud
And wreathed about his neck a misty shroud.
He then, as sudden as he came, passed on
With lifted head, majestic and most proud;
And lone as night, in deepest wood withdrawn,
He roamed in silent rage until another dawn.

What drove the hermit from the valley herd
What cross of love, what cold neglect of kind,
Or scorn of unpretending worth, had stirred
The stubborn blood and drove him forth to find
A fellowship in mountain, cloud and wind—
I ofttime wondered much, and ofttime thought
The beast betrayed a royal monarch's mind
To lift above the low herd's common lot,
And make them hear him still when they had fain forgot.

THE MODOC MILITARY COMMISSION.

SKETCH OF THE MEMBERS.

From the Sacramento Union,
FORT KLAMATH, July 1st.

The trial of Captain Jack and other murderous Modocs, contrary to general expectation in this mixed community, bids fair to have a speedy beginning, and, as a natural consequence, there is rejoicing among officers, soldiers and captives.

THE MEN WHO TRY THE MODOCS.

The officers selected by General Davis to try the Modocs are all excellent men, and are the better for the duty, I believe, because they are not men of the highest rank. They all stand well in the army, are anxious to mete out exact justice, and will zealously perform the work for which they have been chosen. The men of the Commission I give below.

LIEUTENANT COLONEL WASHINGTON L. ELLIOTT.

The senior member of the Commission, Lieutenant Colonel Washington L. Elliott, entered the regular army May 27, 1846, having been appointed from Pennsylvania, and was made Second Lieutenant of the Mounted Rifles, since the Third Cavalry. He served through the Mexican war, was promoted to the position of First Lieutenant July 20, 1849, and in July, 1854, obtained his captaincy. Early in 1861, Captain Elliot was made Major of the First Cavalry, though at that time he was Colonel of the Second Iowa Cavalry. He was breveted Colonel, Brigadier General and Major General of Volunteers successively, and was made full Brigadier General. He had charge of the cavalry of the Army of the Cumberland under the lamented General Thomas, and, as may be presumed, was engaged in some of the hottest fights of the war. He was made Lieutenant-Colonel of the First Cavalry in August, 1866, which position he now holds. Colonel Elliott has been stationed at Benicia barracks of late, and was not engaged in the Modoc difficulties, but his record and reputation are of the highest order. He is about fifty years of age, though he looks forty, and is admirably adapted for the senior position on the Commission.

CAPTAIN JOHN MENDENHALL.

Captain John Mendenhall of Battery G, Fourth Artillery, senior Captain of the Fourth Regiment and more familiarly known as Col. Mendenhall, was appointed to West Point from Indiana in 1847, and graduating in 1851, was brevetted Second Lieutenant of the First Dragoons. In February, 1852, he was transferred to the Fourth Artillery, served at Carlisle, Pennsylvania, and Fort Mifflin, Pennsylvania, and in 1853 put in time at Fort Brown and Ringgold Barracks, Texas, staying three months in the State, when he was promoted to Second Lieutenant and ordered to Fort Hamilton, New York, remaining at the latter post until May, 1855. He crossed the plains with General Harney, on the Sioux expedition, participated in the battle of Ash Hollow, etc., went to Fort Laramie, came home sick in the summer of 1856, was promoted to a First Lieutenancy and ordered to a battery then serving in Florida. Some time in the fall of 1857 he was stationed with the regiment at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, and in the spring of 1858 he crossed the plains to Fort Laramie, Wyoming Territory, on the Utah expedition. During the fall of the year he had a leave of absence, and at its expiration recruited for his company at New York. He went to Fortress Monroe, Virginia, in August, 1859, and remained on duty until January, 1861, meantime being promoted to a Captaincy. He repaired to his battery at Louisville, Kentucky, and with it joined the army of the Ohio, at Nashville, Tennessee, was assigned to Crittenden's Division, marched to Pittsburg Landing, and engaged in the battle of Shiloh. Afterward he returned to Louisville, Kentucky, where the army was divided into three wings, and he was assigned to the left, and made Chief of Artillery. The Captain was, in April, 1866, ordered to Erie, to observe the operations of the Fenians; and from thence in 1867 he was sent to Buffalo, also staying a portion of the year at Fort Washington, Maryland. Three months of the year 1868 he was a member of General Hancock's staff, and held the position of Assistant Inspector General. Late in 1868 he was transferred to Light Battery B, Fort Wayne, Michigan, remaining there until February, 1870, when he was ordered to Fort Johnson, North Carolina, and made several excursions into the country after the notorious Lowery outlaws. He was ordered to Black Point, San Francisco, in November, 1872, and in April, 1873, came to the scene of the Modoc troubles. Capt. Mendenhall is of light complexion, stands about five feet nine inches in the hobnailed shoes worn on this expedition, and weighs, at a guess, 145 pounds. His hair and whiskers are intermingled with gray. His gray eyes are bright and twinkling, and his face a pleasant one; he is on the sunny side of 44. He is deservedly popular in the army, is a man of sound judgment, and one who can always be relied upon.

CAPTAIN HARRY C. HASBROUCK.

Captain Harry C. Hasbrouck, of Battery B, Fourth Artillery, entered West Point from Newberg, New York, in 1856, graduated in 1861, and was immediately made Second Lieutenant of the West Point Battery, and stationed at Washington. He remained there until after it became Battery D of the Fifth Artillery, Captain Charles Griffin, afterwards General commanding the Fifth Corps. In December, 1861, he was assigned to Battery L of the Fourth Artillery, doing duty at Fortress Monroe, and served in southeastern Virginia until 1863, when he obtained sick leave and was assigned to duty at West Point as Acting Assistant Professor. At the expiration of one year he was relieved and sent to join his battery in front of Richmond, where he remained during the siege and until the fall of Richmond. Afterwards he was ordered to garrison duty at Fort Delaware. In 1866 he was promoted to a Captaincy, and in '68 transferred to Light Battery B, which he joined at Fort Leavenworth. Since then he has served at Fort Riley, Fort McHenry and the Presidio, and last in the Modoc country. Here he had a fine field for brave and spirited work, and accomplished it in a manner that not alone reflects credit upon himself and men, but redounds to the honor of the army.

Captain Hasbrouck is a handsome, dashing officer of 33, has a fine soldierly bearing, wears a martial moustache and no beard, stands about five feet ten inches, and weighs about 155 pounds.

CAPTAIN ROBERT POLLOCK.

In 1846 Captain Pollock, always called Colonel outside of papers in tape, was commissioned Second Lieutenant of a Virginia regiment and sent to the Mexican war. He served with the army of occupation, under General Taylor, to the close of the contest, when he was mustered out of the service with the remainder of the volunteers. He came to California as a citizen in 1854, and has since never been east of the Rocky Mountains. He was appointed Major of the First Regiment of California Volunteers, and then transferred to the Third Regiment Infantry, which he assisted in organizing. Subsequently he was promoted to Lieutenant Colonel and then Colonel of the regiment, and served on the plains. The regiment was consolidated in Utah in 1864, according to the act of Congress, and the officers mustered out. He was then appointed Lieutenant Colonel of the Second California Volunteers (infantry), Colonel ...ght's regiment, and stationed in Arizona. In 1866 the regiment was mustered out of the volunteer service, and Colonel Pollock was immediately commissioned First Lieutenant in the regular army, and assigned to the Thirty-second Regiment of Infantry. He has since served in Arizona, Washington Territory, Oregon and California. During the last year—excepting the time when he was Field Quartermaster and Commissary for the Modoc expedition—he has been Quartermaster or Commander at Fort Klamath. He is now Captain of Company I, Twenty-first Infantry, and his proper station is Camp Warner. Captain Pollock is a man who will pull down the scales at 200 without the slightest exertion—a sturdy, compact man, with the bluff though genial manners of a ship captain. He is on the shady side of forty five. San Francisco is largely indebted to him for the organization of that crack military company, the National Guard.

LIEUTENANT GEORGE W. KINGSBURY.

The appointment of Second Lieutenant George W. Kingsbury as a member of the Commission is a handsome compliment to a gallant soldier and an accomplished gentleman. Lieutenant Kingsbury enlisted as a private soldier in the Sixteenth Regiment of Vermont Volunteers in 1862, and in 1861 was promoted to the position of Second Lieutenant. He was with the Fifth and Ninth Corps, in the Army of the Potomac, and served through the second Maryland campaign; was in the battle of Gettysburg, and in Grant's campaign of 1864 and 1865, which terminated in the fall of Richmond. At the battle of Spottsylvania, Va., he received a remarkably close call, a ball passing into his chest, through the left lung and thence to the spine, making its exit between the eighth and ninth ribs. He was brevetted three times for gallant and meritorious services on the battlefields of the Wilderness and Spottsylvania. Lieutenant Kingsbury was honorably discharged, for wounds received, in October, 1868, and received an appointment as Second Lieutenant in the Veteran Reserve Corps, Twenty-third Regiment; was placed in command of Company D, and stationed at Jeffersonville, Indiana, where he remained until the fall of 1865. Next he served as Adjutant at the mustering out camp of the Wisconsin Volunteers, and subsequently he joined his regiment at Milwaukee. He was assigned to duty in the Freedman's Bureau in the spring of 1866, and served in Virginia, Kentucky and Alabama until the fall of 1869. He was appointed Second Lieutenant in the regular army in May, 1867, and joined his regiment, the Forty-third Infantry, in 1869. He was afterward transferred to the Twelfth Infantry, and in February, 1870, was assigned to duty at Camp Gaston, California, where he acted as Post Adjutant, Quartermaster and Commissary, until the Modoc troubles came. After Colonel Wright's death Lieutenant Kingsbury assumed charge of Company E, Twelfth Infantry, and retains the command. Lieutenant Kingsbury has been Judge Advocate of the court-martial held in the field under General Davis' orders. He is a trim, light-complexioned Benedict, and will kick the beam at 125. He is the junior member of the Commission.

MAJOR CURTIS, JUDGE ADVOCATE.

Major Herbert P. Curtis, Judge Advocate of the Court, entered the Fifth Massachusetts Cavalry in January, 1862, served in the Army of the Potomac until June, 1865, and was then ordered to Washington and made Judge Advocate, with the rank of Major. He has entered upon his work with a hearty good will. There cannot be convictions without evidence and evidence, except in the Peace Commission tragedy, is a scarce article.

THE TERRITORIES.

Arizona, in the last census, reported eleven foreigners in prison on June 30, 1870, and no natives.

The annual fires in the woods on Puget Sound have broken out, and the atmosphere there is filled with smoke.

The revenue cutter Lincoln is having her bottom scraped at Olympia, at least we have seen five items in the two daily papers there to that effect.

The "glorious" Fourth passed off and away from Steilacoom very quietly. At Puyallup and at Mr. John Rigney's, we understand, better time was had.

Arizona, Colorado and New Mexico of all the Territories have no paupers receiving public support, according to the last census. Each State has a number.

The Olympia Tribune publishes a rumor that the hands employed on the railroad had all been stopped in their work, and that the suspension would continue ten days.

In answer to an inquiry from Waitsburg, W. T., we would state that the Corresponding Secretary of the Oregon Farmers' Union is John H. Smith and we believe his postoffice address is Albany, Linn county.

The Walla Walla Statesman says: "A Warm Spring Indian named Jim, fresh from the Modoc war, was in town on Thursday last, and, dressed in full regimentals, attracted considerable attention. Jim was disposed to be vain glorious over his achievements, and was emphatic in the opinion that he had "killed as many of the enemy as they had killed of him."

The quartz ledge recently discovered on the Pend d'Oreille Lake, opposite the mouth of Cabinet river, assays $232 73 gold, and 94 73 silver, to the ton, besides about fifty per cent of galena. The Walla Walla Statesman says another ledge on the west shore of the lake, which crops out from two to five feet, and is visible for nearly a mile. The rock from this ledge, which has been named the Sunbeam, has been assayed by Mr. Elmer, and yields, gold, $291 53; silver, $2 13 per ton. This ledge is about six feet wide. That part of the county is evidently very rich in minerals, and all it needs is prospecting.

The Olympia Tribune says: "Since the coming of Surveyor General McMicken, deputy surveyors are very numerous in the Capital. There are three here from east of the mountains, and others from different parts of the Territory. We are informed that Capt. McMicken has indicated his intention to exercise no partiality in the distribution of the work, and that no one will have an exclusively prairie contract—it will be with all part prairie and part woods. Neither will the new Surveyor General exact ten, fifteen, twenty or twenty five per cent. of the contract for political purposes or personal perquisites. The work is also to be done when needed in the principal unsurveyed settlements of the Territory. Everything, we are assured, will be conducted in an upright manner, of which neither the Government, people nor deputy surveyors will have cause to complain.

Satanta and Big Tree, those famous Texas murderers, yet vex the soul of Governor Davis of that State. We read in a Washington telegram that in a recent conference between the Governor, the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and the Secretary of the Interior, it was decided to postpone further consideration of the matter until August, at which time another conference will be held in Texas. Governor Davis, the Indians and the Commissioner are to be present at the conference. It occurs to us that this affair occupies much more time than was consumed in the Matt. Tarpey business in southern California. Barrin' the disrespect to Mr. Delano, we would suggest that a very long, unprofitable discussion, of which the people have tired long since, could be satisfactorily ended by the purchase of a certain number of yards of woven hemp. The recipe is infallible in Indian matters.

A careless tank keeper on the New York Central Road neglected to turn off the water after an engine had been supplied, the other day, and a train of palace cars passed under the stream and were flooded, the water pouring down through the ventilators in torrents and raining much costly clothing. The conductor told the saturated ones to make out their bills, however, and the company would pay for the damage.

Matters at the Mint.

PHILADELPHIA, July 10.—The mint is now engaged in remelting large quantities of light gold coin. Since Jan. 1st $23 000,000 worth have been melted, and $10 000,000 more will be received and recoined this week. Orders for the new trade dollars will be filled in the early part of next week. Exciting, but Somewhat Vague.

ST. PAUL, July 10.—The following dispatch has been received from Fort Garry: Excitement still continues over the arrest of detectives Hayes and Regan, who attempted to kidnap the notorious Lord Gordon, of Erie R. R. fame. Fletcher and Merriam of Minneapolis, with Mr. Bentley, merchant, were also arrested the following day, as accomplices. They were rudely thrust into filthy prisons and ironed. Major Brackett at once sought admission to the prisoners, which was granted by Judge Belcourt, but he was immediately ordered out by the Sheriff, under instructions from Attorney General Clark. Yesterday the preliminary examination commenced. The whole day was occupied in taking Lord Gordon's testimony, which was known to be a tissue of falsehoods and exaggerations. He was not allowed to act for the defense but was permitted to occupy a seat and confer with counsel for defense. Great indignation is felt against the authorities for the high handed manner in which they managed the cause. Lord Gordon is freely using money, his friends having retained nearly all the lawyers here. Every obstacle seems to be thrown in the way to prevent testimony being given. Only one or two witnesses have been examined. Nothing new was elicited. The object of the detectives in capturing Gordon was to take him to a place where he is wanted by parties who want bail for his appearance as a witness in the Erie Railroad case, and by other parties.

A Second Atlantic.

NEW YORK, July 10.—A five column statement of a City of Washington passenger charges the loss of the steamer to the criminal carelessness of the officers and crew, and that all just barely escaped being engulfed. An ocean captain, who was a passenger, frequently warned the chief officer that he was running too far northward and advised running 100 miles further south, but his advice was disregarded, though the second officer coincided with it. No sight was taken for seven days, notwithstanding which the vessel was going through heavy fog at the rate of twelve or thirteen knots per hour.

NEW YORK, July 10.—Mr. Bellows has resigned the Vice Presidency of the Pacific Mail Steamship Co.

The Mail says that Colonel Thomas A. Scott sailed from Philadelphia to-day. He will return about the 10th of October.

MILWAUKEE, July 10.—A young burglar named Behrens was shot dead this morning while trying to escape from the officers. He had been robbing the store of his uncle.

Dana's Libel Suit.

NEW YORK, July 11.—A Washington dispatch says that several lawyers engaged directly and indirectly upon the Sheppard-Dana libel suit, have prepared briefs for argument of the case before Judge Blatchford, or notes for briefs. It is claimed that the Police Court of the District of Columbia exists by act of Congress within a Territory where Congress has exclusive jurisdiction over all offenses against the United States and not punishable by punishment in the penitentiary; that libels of newspapers which are sent into the District are answerable to this Court upon complaint of any person ... before it; that such newspapers contain ... held to be libelous, and may be brought before it from any part of the United States ... tried under the law of libel ... here, which ... libel a criminal offense.

Belcher, saloon keeper, and Christopher Spilse, blacksmith.

Destructive Fire in Worcester.

WORCESTER, Mass., July 11.—At 11 o'clock last night a fire broke out in Burdett's block, in a line of wooden buildings. The flames spread to the stables attached to the Leominster Hotel, and from thence to the hotel and the factory of the Arlington Piano Company, where two hundred finished and unfinished pianos were destroyed. The hotel building was destroyed, but the furniture was saved in a damaged condition. Jones' block was next burned, but a small stream here intervened, and the progress of the fire was arrested. The loss is from $1,000,000 to $1,000,000.

CALIFORNIA.

From San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 11.—The physicians say the cause of Gen. Casement's sudden death was pneumonia. He was in poor health on the Fourth, but took part in the celebration, nothing serious being apprehended at that time. The second brigade of the National Guard will be ordered out to attend the funeral on Sunday.

Capt. Bert. Pratt will be buried Saturday by the National Guard, of which he was at one time Captain.

The Republican County Committee met to-night to canvass the returns of the primary elections. The Convention will hold its first session to-morrow.

Chas. Bond (colored), a barber on one of the China steamships, cut his throat this evening, inflicting wounds which will probably prove mortal. Domestic trouble was the cause of the act.

An attempt was made to launch a diving bell from the Witch Queen, the pearl fishing vessel, to-day, when it was found that the valve and man hole leaked, and the bell had to be taken up again. Another trial will be probably be made next week, on the Oakland side of the bay, where it is a sandy bottom.

There is a strike amongst some of the coal miners in Somersville—Mount Diablo coal mines. It is stated that the men have not struck for time or wages, but want to control the working of the mines themselves. The strike is confined to the men at the Pittsburg mine.

GENERAL NOTES AND NEWS.

An earnest appeal is made in California in behalf of the widow of Gen. Canby.

Leaves of the rhubarb plant eaten as greens killed a woman in Maine last week.

The fire in the woods near Plymouth, Me., was got under control on Saturday afternoon.

They burned the Mayor of Albany, New York, in effigy the other night, and got up an alarm of fire over it.

The Richmond (Va.) Enquirer describes Hiram Power's zeal for the Union during the war as almost fanatical.

Mr. Charles Hale, formerly of the Boston Advertiser, is reported to be the new editor of the Globe, of the same city.

Senator Sumner will spend the warm weather in Massachusetts, and will soon leave Washington. His condition has greatly improved within six months past. To all appearances he is now on the high road to health. He uses but little medicine, since he suffers no longer from pain in the head and spine as formerly. He sleeps well, and without the use of opiates, and can walk, read, or write without feeling especially fatigued.

The people of the District of Columbia are just beginning to find out the character and extent of the bills taking money from them that were passed by the Legislature just adjourned. The most objectionable is the general sewerage system bill, levying two cents a square foot on all property in the city without regard to position or whether all the sewerage about a lot had been finished. The amount thus levied is two million dollars. The bill was forced through by a reported violation of parliamentary rules and legislative trickery. Governor Cooke has not yet signed it and there are strong hopes that he will not. By another bill about three hundred thousand dollars was voted to pay the Board of Public Works' expenses, which it claims were incurred in negotiating the first four million loan. The appropriation of $15,000 to pay debts incurred at the inauguration ball was smuggled through in a conference committee when neither house had considered it, and by an arrangement with the officers it was not read at the desk at all.

August Comte declared that the intelligence of women amounted, at best, to "only a small infinitesimal sagacity;" but he never dared to say that to a woman who had practiced with dumb-bells.

The Salary Grab Condemned.

General Butler may continue to make witty speeches about the back pay grab of Congress, and Senator Carpenter may make as many of his inimitable arguments as he chooses to justify the obnoxious bill, but the public will not be captured by the pert sayings of the one, nor convinced by the plausible logic of the other. The Republican party has spoken out against the iniquity in terms that cannot be misunderstood or misconstrued. Wherever the party has met in convention since the passage of the odious act, wherever the people of the party have had opportunity to speak upon the subject, they have denounced the action of Congress in passing the bill, and have demanded its repeal. In some instances, as in the case of the Republican State Convention of Maine, they have denounced, not the retrospective provision of the law alone, but the entire scheme of increasing the pay of Members of Congress. The resolution adopted by that Convention vigorously denounces the entire act, and demands its repeal.

It is hardly probable, however, that if the retrospective provision had been left out and the increase of salary had been made to apply only to future Congressmen, the passage of the act would have attracted much attention. It has come to be pretty generally understood that our Senators and Representatives, especially the former, cannot maintain themselves in the style now prevalent among them upon the pay they receive from the Government; and although the pertinent question is often asked, whether the style itself is not out of character in Republican government, still we apprehend there are few of us who would not say if the choice were given us that we would rather our Senator and our Representative would live up to the style of his peers than that he should break away from the recognized order of things and set himself up for a pattern of republican simplicity. In other words, while we should like very much to see all the representatives of the people live like true citizens, instead of like a titled nobility, we have a pride in seeing the dignity of our State supported as well as that of any other State. So we should find excuses enough for an increase of pay. But when it becomes a mere grab of several thousand dollars each by a lot of men who have entered Congress under an agreement to serve the public for a less amount, the injustice of the thing excites general indignation. The Albany (N. Y.) Journal has the following sensible paragraph upon this subject:

> However objectionable the prospective increase, it is undoubtedly the retrospective feature of the act which has excited most of the public feeling. The people do not like that way of doing things. So far as the future is concerned, it might be said that if the salary is increased it is at least partially compensated by the abolition of mileage and of the franking privilege. That does not excuse but somewhat relieves it. But nothing of the kind can be said of the back-salary appropriation. It was seized while the mileage and the franking were still in force. It was appropriated though the members appropriating it had contracted to serve for the old salary. This is what particularly rouses popular indignation, and had there been any doubtful sentiment in the Republican party, it might have contented itself with an expression on this point.

The New York Times (as well as many other of the best journals of the East) is disgusted with the "Beecher scandal." It says that a good many correspondents write to ask why it does not take any notice of the affair. In reply it says: "We do not believe there is any 'scandal' in the affair beyond what backbiters and slanderers have invented; and then it seems to us that there is quite enough scandal afloat in New York at the present moment without our going over to Brooklyn for more. Mr. Beecher publishes a letter sufficiently explicit on the subject, and we copy it to-day from the Brooklyn Eagle—a paper which has taken very many courses in reference to all this nasty gossip, as it is in the habit of doing in reference to most cases of the kind."

There is considerable excitement in the city in consequence of rumors that smallpox is prevalent. We apprehend that most of the excitement has grown out of the action of parties who removed a patient from the Metropolis Hotel to a vacant house in the south part of the city without notifying the city authorities, and thus imperilled the health of the neighborhood. Out of this matter have sprung rumors of smallpox hidden away in every part of the city. There is no cause whatever for alarm. The Mayor and Committee have always taken every possible precaution against the spread of this contagion in the city, and the result has been that the disease has never been general.

"Pent up Utica" has burst the frail bonds of sobriety and now airs her uncontracted powers to the infinite disgust of that staid little village, New York. We speak of Mrs. Utica Bowker, a sister of Vic Woodhull, who was arrested ten days ago in New York on a charge of being drunk and disorderly. In return she filed a complaint against Colonel Blood and Victoria Woodhull, accusing them of beating her cruelly and having her arrested without cause. There is a no-account streak running through the Woodhull family—as has been remarked before.

At a meeting of the Methodist ministers of New York City, held June 30th, a paper on the statistics of the five principal religious denominations of the city was read by Rev. Mr. Goss. The figures showed that the Episcopalians were the most prosperous, the Presbyterians next, Catholics next, and the Baptists and Methodists about on an equal footing. For the last eighteen years the Methodist cause has been waning, but as a local preacher he had no despair.

The Springfield Republican of the 7th inst. says: "Vice President Wilson has passed into that stage of health which Chase has so long occupied—a paralytic invalid—to whom life is of the most uncertain duration. The nature of his disease may not utterly destroy his usefulness as a man and public servant, but it will undoubtedly limit his attention and activity. With careful nursing and cessation of exciting toil he may enjoy for many years a kind of honorary post in public councils."

Mr. John Stewart, after patient study of the exasperating problem, has declined to surrender the keys of St. John's Methodist Church, Newark. A liberal streak of latent profanity has developed in the congregation which, under favorable circumstances, worships in that edifice. John is sexton, and his salary for the fiscal year is unpaid.

The Boston Advertiser reminds the people of Massachusetts that the monument to the memory of that grand old patriot, Governor John A. Andrew, has been forgotten "in the multitude of distractions."

Progress in the South.

After all the horrid tales of anarchy and rebellion with which the wordy opposition have sought to influence the public mind, there is genuine ground for hope that the great South is not wholly given over to the torch and the bowie-knife. The tide of sectional feeling—of hostility to the North—is slowly ebbing, and only occasionally do we hear the ancient cry of invaded rights from some stranded politician left high and dry by the receding current. Social disorders which have disfigured her local histories from time to time are abating. Industries are springing to life in waste places. Trade is slowly regaining its old-time vigor. The reports of the Agricultural Department at Washington show that her cotton fields and rice savannahs are cultivated far more successfully under the new doctrine of human rights than ever before. The press, rural and metropolitan, is putting forth its strongest endeavor to aid the work of rehabilitation, now almost completed. The discussion of dead issues is left to the politician and the carpet-bagger, and in its place comes sound advice on internal improvements and the encouragement of home industries. The Convention of Congressmen of the Mississippi valley had for its object the resuscitation of commerce in the South. The meeting of Governors of the Southern States, held in Atlanta several weeks ago, was to a similar purpose. The Senate Special Committee on Transportation Routes to the Seaboard have under discussion the Kanawha and James River Canal project. And in a recent number of the New Orleans Times we notice an article which contains some very interesting suggestions for the encouragement of the vast commerce of New Orleans. The bar of Pass a l'Outre has been for years the great obstacle to the shipping of that port. Costly dredging has been unavailing:—the slow drift of sands and the huge burdens of sediment which are constantly brought down by the Mississippi river, defy all the remedial efforts that have been lavished by the General Government year after year. The Times thinks it very discreditable to a great country and an all-powerful Government to have five millions of dollars' worth of property in ships and products embargoed for weeks (as was the case less than a month ago) by a senseless bar, which ought either to be removed or flanked. We are told that there are now trading between New Orleans and Europe more than thirty steamships of large capacity, representing an annual average entrance and clearance of 600,000 tons. It is very reasonably argued that the free development of the business and commerce of the port cannot properly be carried on, so long as vessels are liable to be detained, for weeks, on a bar at the entrance to the city. The Times proposes to evade this obstruction by the construction of the Fort St. Philip canal, whereby a new outlet to the Gulf will be opened. The attention of Congress will be called to the matter at the December session of that body. Here is afforded another opportunity for the display of that fraternal feeling which has always underlain the strongest passions of the war, and in which, it is to be noted, the North has never been wanting.

In all these evidences of returning health and strength with which the horizon of the South is lighted up, we find cause for heartiest congratulations. We have to be thankful that the bitter feuds of a long and exhausting war did not utterly extinguish in the bosom of our recent foes the free flame of love of country; that the people of the desolated South can turn from the sword to the plow with strong hearts and willing hands to accomplish that thorough and complete reconstruction wherein lies the path to a material prosperity which is far more to be desired than the cankerous wealth of the olden time. Gainsay it who may, the great South is not oppressed; her hands are free. Nor are her people discontented. With the capture of Le Blanc the last spark of insurrection and domestic violence in Louisiana was extinguished. We predict that it will be many a year before the scenes of last March again curse her peace.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

San Francisco in 1850. A. L. Bancroft & Co.

A book having the above title has just been placed on our table by J. K. Gill & Co., booksellers of this city. The title does not suggest substance enough for a duodecimo of three hundred pages; but such is the book, nevertheless, and the pages are all filled with matter that cannot but be interesting to persons of this coast. The men and manners of the old mining days are very cleverly described and the descriptions of the city—its buildings, wharves, institutions, etc—in 1850 is so specified and given in such detail as to enable a person who is familiar with the San Francisco of to-day to form an accurate idea of its growth and development. The book has no very great merit as a literary performance, but it will be found a pleasant and agreeable entertainer for an afternoon. In printing this book Bancroft & Co. have evidently borne in mind the fact that it was to be read by the pioneers. The large, clear type is designed for eyes that have seen a good many summers.

The Pacific Coast Second Reader, by A. W. Patterson

This is the second of a series of Readers prepared by Dr. Patterson, of Eugene City, and published by Bancroft & Co. It is a very attractive little school book, being well arranged to advance the pupil step by step in the art of reading, and beautifully illustrated. The only thing we see in the book to find fault with, is the preface. This sentence for example: "As the range of vocabulary in reading lessons becomes greater, it is not practicable to gather all the new words into spelling lessons, without making them longer and more numerous than is desirable." "Range of vocabulary" is stiff and clumsy. "Without making them longer," etc. What noun does them stand for? Grammatically, for "words." That is, by putting them into spelling lessons, the new words are made longer and more numerous than they are when not so arranged. The author probably wished to say it required too long and too numerous spelling lessons to embrace all the new words. Such a sentence might be allowed in some kinds of books, but it ought not to appear in a school reader.

The Independent of the 3d instant contains a characteristic story by Joaquin Miller, entitled The End of the Leather Nose. The story is thoroughly western and quite as Californian as an Oregon boy could write.

The New York Times of June 30th comes to us printed from new type, new engines and a Walter press, of all of which it is justly proud. The Times is an excellent journal, and it is growing and improving daily.

The national debt less cash in the Treasury, on the 1st of July, was $2,147,818,993. The decrease for the month of June, as appears by the Treasurer's circular, was $2,145 150.

SITKA CORRESPONDENCE

AN INTERESTING VOYAGE.

SITKA, Alaska Ter., July, 1873.

The good ship California left your city one Sunday morning about 10 o'clock for this port. After touching at Astoria in the evening, in order to obtain her clearance, she started for the open sea. We found the bar unusually smooth, so that among the male passengers there were no cases of sea sickness. Our first stopping place was Neah bay, which we reached one afternoon. On suddenly rounding the point of an island which lies at its mouth, you enter the harbor. The harbor side of the island is in the form of a semi circle, in the center of which is the principal settlement. At one extremity of this crescent is a large house, the residence of a former Indian Agent. On the reservation are some 600 Indians, four white men and two white women. The Indians live in three villages and subsist mostly upon the produce of the fur seal fishery. Lately they have had a very successful season. The cargo was taken off the ships in canoes. While we were there it was quite difficult to hire men for these canoes, as, from the sale of the skins of the seals they had caught, most of them had plenty of money and were very independent. Wages are generally from $1 to $1 50 per day. I think in the present instance even higher wages were paid. Flour seemed to be the principal article we sent on shore. The seal skins are worth at this place from $10 to $15 apiece, when bought from the Indians. They have quite a large school house and a number of pupils. Most of the canoes alongside were large, and manned by six or eight natives; there was one, however, for passengers, which was smaller than the rest, and quite fancifully adorned. Some of the women wore pieces of shells, or what looked like silver, in their noses, by way of ornament.

We left this place the same evening, and were in Port Townsend the next morning. Most of the residences here are situated upon the bluff which overlooks the town, the flat being occupied by hotels, stores and restaurants. We stopped at Seattle, then at Olympia, where we were obliged to stay twelve hours longer than was necessary, to wait for the high tide, and coming north at Steilacoom. I was sorry that it was dark at the time of our arriving at the latter place, as I had a great desire to see it, having heard so much of its natural beauty.

From Port Townsend we went to San Juan Island. The entrance to the bay in which in which is the landing is through a very narrow channel between the rocks. There is but one street there, with a few houses on each side, the camp being about a mile off. We stopped here but a very few minutes, the parties whom we were expecting being already on the wharf.

At Victoria we were obliged to lie off and on at the mouth of the harbor, waiting for the tide. When we arrived all the stores were closed, which was a greater embargo upon smuggling from there into the United States than if there had been any number of collectors around.

We passed through the channel which at present forms the boundary line between the two countries, and on emerging into the Gulf of Georgia could see in the distance, in an easterly direction, the entrance to the other channel, which Great Britain claimed as the dividing line. Both the entrance and whole passage is broader, but not so deep as that more westerly. The scenery was magnificent; the shores were high and wooded, and there was any number of high wooded islands, which were very picturesque, with the water winding around the hillsides in beautiful curves. The Olympic range of mountains, in Washington Territory, on the south side of the Straits of Fuca, lay snow-capped in the distance. The variations of light and shade caused by the reflections of the clouds upon the hillsides were beautiful. The Gulf of Georgia, as we passed through it, was as smooth as a mill-pond, although, on account of its width, there is not unfrequently quite a sea caused by the sweep of the winds.

The harbor of Nanaimo is formed by an inlet with an island nearly across its mouth. We hauled alongside of the railroad wharf, which is very high and extends out some distance, having at the end two chutes for discharging the coal into ships. The bottoms of the cars fall out upon touching a spring and dump their contents. The railroad extends about one-half a mile to the mouth of the pit where there are two shafts with stationary engines for raising the coal. I had no desire to descend into the mine as they are all of about the same pattern, terribly hot, wet and dirty with nothing to be seen but the wooden supports of the roof and narrow passages and men working on their backs and in other positions, picking out the coal or ore whichever it is. There are several miners' log houses near the railway and one large house for the superintendent which has a flower garden attached. On the right of the wharf is the Chinese quarter, which consists of four houses joined together. The rest of the town is in the form of a semicircle circling around an estuary with very high banks. There is a library, two churches, Episcopal and Wesleyan, another name for Methodist, two lodges of Masons and one school house. In the Episcopal Sunday School there are about twenty five children, in the Wesleyan about fifty. There are several stores, of which one is kept by an American, the rest by Jews, and several saloons. Linen goods are 25 per cent cheaper than in Portland and labor about 50 per cent.

Early one morning we passed the rapids. As it was high water we could see nothing, the water being perfectly smooth, but we rolled a little at the worst point. At low tide, the water boils and a ship goes through at about a mile in two minutes—fast for a vessel though not for a railroad train.

As we passed Queen Charlotte's Sound we had beautiful weather and I could not help noticing Cape Caution and the terrible long reef of rocks on which the steamer Geo S. Wright was supposed to have been wrecked, with a total loss of ship, cargo and all on board. At that time there must have been very heavy weather, and probably a driving snow storm, so that nothing could be seen twenty rods ahead, and the seas rolling mountain high.

Some distance further on our view was enlivened with any number of the most beautiful waterfalls of all sizes and varieties. We could trace them as little threads of water, high up the mountain sides, coming out of a glacier from under the snow and falling down, gradually becoming larger, winding around, finally jumping off in a big sheet over the rocks, throwing up clouds of spray and finally, as a roaring river, emptying into the Sound.

The mountains were of such varied heights, covered at their base with woods and at the tops with everlasting snows. Some were rounded and majestic, others conical and sharp pointed, representing enormous churches, with spires pointed toward the heavens eternally proclaiming the praise of their Great Maker. As for height they must have towers at least 5,000 feet perpendicularly almost from the water's edge, and yet they only seemed about one half mile high. Along their sides were big, bare streaks where the trees had been shorn away, by the glaciers, roaring and tearing as they fell; and the whole reminded me of an old man with hoary head, bald at the top and with large bald streaks through his hair. Most of the passengers just sat and gazed; enjoying the majestic scenery, the fine mild air and the "dolce far niente" to their hearts' content and they had plenty of opportunity, for it was daylight from half past three in the morning till ten at night, then daylight till twelve and darkness only about three hours. We stopped at Fort Tongas, a small fur-trading station, and at Fort Wrangle. At the latter place I visited the Stockade, built in the form of a square with timbers as high as an ordinary house and enormous wooden gates at the sally ports defended also by two block houses. Inside was the parade ground and several nice houses, one of which had a very pretty garden. There was no garrison; there were two stores, one of which is kept by the Government Agent. The vessel anchored off a short distance and passengers and freight were landed in canoes on the rocks. Between Fort Wrangle and Sitka we had quite a stretch of open sea to pass. Cape Harmony extended out a long distance and remained in sight most of the way. Upon our arrival we tied to the dock and there your correspondent will let things remain until further notice. SITKA.

A Charitable Soul.—M. Audibert, Director of the Paris, Lyons and Mediterranean Railway, was buried yesterday. He was a capable administrator, and an homme du monde. Many stories are now told of him. It is said he always emptied his pockets of money before getting home at night in deeds of charity, and one day left his cab with a single piece of money. As he put his foot on the ground, one of his habitual beggars held out his hand and received the piece. M. Audibert had nothing left to pay the cabman, who remarked that when one could not pay his fare one went on foot. A scene followed. Just then the beggar came up and offered to loan his day's earnings, four francs fifty centimes. M. Audibert accepted it with a hearty laugh, paid the cabman, and the next day sent the beggar 500 francs.—From a Paris Letter.

The County Commissioners of Marion county have donated $100 to the Salem city clock fund.

From all parts of the State pleasure seekers are wending their way to the mountains and seaside.

Harvest has already begun in some portions of Lane county. There will be no discount on the yield.

The Albany Foundry Company is to be furnished with coal from the Beaver coal mines on the Santiam.

The Enterprise announces an addition of three to the population of Oregon this week in the natural way.

Miss Queen A. Hannah, of Linn county, who has been insane for eight years, has been taken to East Portland.

The Albany Democrat says there are 54 civil and 6 criminal causes on the Circuit Court docket for Benton county.

Linn county claims to be the champion butter making county in the State, and it brings 16 cents a pound at Albany.

Brownsville and nearly all the balance of the forty villages in the State had successful celebrations on the Fourth.

The Grangers of Tangent have erected a large and comfortable hall at that place and dedicated it to the use of their association.

Farmers who had their wheat thrown down by the storms in June are rejoicing that the July suns are raising it straight again.

Prof. Fowler will lecture at Lafayette this Saturday evening, and inspect the phrenological developments of the citizens of that burg.

The annual meeting of the Siloam Baptist Association, held during the week in Syracuse precinct, Linn county, was largely attended and very interesting to those present.

The Tillamook wagon road is so far completed as to pass wagons across the mountain. This opens up a new era in the clam country, and one that will be hailed with general rejoicing.

The District Conference of the M. E. Church South, for Oregon, convened at McFarland's school house, six miles south of Albany, on Friday, the 11th inst. Bishop McTyere presides.

The body of Riley Thorp, drowned in the Santiam several weeks ago, has been found. It was discovered in a slough about half a mile below where he was supposed to have been crossing the stream.

The Albany Democrat announces a birth thusly: "Prof. Warren, President of Albany Collegiate Institute, is glad vacation season has come, because he can have plenty of time to caress his new girl baby, which graduated into this paregorical and teeth cutting sphere last Monday."

The Linn County Farmers' Union—the oldest farmers' company in Oregon—incorporated June, 1871, is putting a new stone foundation under its warehouse at Shedd, and otherwise fixing things up. A Welzeth engine, which is a model of beauty and simplicity, has been imported, with which to drive the elevators, and is now on the ground. It will shortly be put in place.

The Albany Register says: "Mr. Miller, of the Beaver coal mines, called on Wednesday, bringing with him some fine specimens of coal taken from these new mines. If the coal proves as good as it looks, these mines will prove mines of wealth to the owners, and of vast importance to Linn county. The mines are situated on the Santiam, about ten miles northeast of Lebanon. The company intend putting the coal on the market at as early a day as practicable."

A gentleman of Albany has just returned from Ochoco and thinks that the second Eldorado has not been discovered over there. Fifty are at work prospecting and some of them have developed pretty good signs. A company from Canyon City are opening a creek dam about four miles long) and everybody else over there seems to be waiting to see what the result of their work will be. They have already gone down about 15 feet and have not yet found bedrock. Prospectors have no trouble in finding "color" in any of the canyons or gulches about there, but they find nothing sufficiently flattering upon which to base hopes of adequate reward for the labor of mining. From report it is scarcely probable that the Ochoco mines will create any very great stampede from other sections.

For Sale,

850,000 Acres of Land

IN SOUTHERN OREGON.

Title Perfect—U. S. Land Grant Fully Confirmed.

THE "PACIFIC LAND COMPANY," INCORPORATED with capital stock of 5,000 shares of par value of $240 each, have purchased the road and entire land grant of the "OREGON CENTRAL MILITARY ROAD COMPANY," consisting of over 850,000 acres of Agricultural, Grazing & Timber Lands,

Passing from Eugene City (125 miles from Portland by Railroad) through the splendid "Lake Country," to Silver City, near the border of Idaho.

Each share of the PACIFIC LAND COMPANY thus representing now over 160 acres of land, and is UNASSESSABLE.

Three thousand shares belong to the Company, and will be offered for sale by us, the entire proceeds of which will go into the Treasury.

The first one thousand shares will be offered at $120 per share, United States Currency—say at the rate of 75 cents per acre. Every share will also be received at its par value of $240, in payment for land, as soon as the appraisals are made. Such share will then be cancelled, and not reissued, and a deed given to the purchaser.

The land will be appraised at moderate rates, in accordance with its actual value, as soon as practicable, in sections of 640 acres, and at not less than $1 50 per acre, U. S. Currency, and offered for sale. Actual settlers, however, always having preference.

We refer, as to the character of this magnificent grant of land, to CLARENCE KING, Esq., the U. S. Geologist for this coast, who is familiar with it from personal observation; also to the elaborate report of the Hon. B. J. Pengra, late Surveyor General of Oregon, on this road and lands, from which we quote: "There is but very little of the entire grant but what is valuable for either Farming, Grazing or Lumbering purposes."

As shares are cancelled, the average of acres to the remaining shares will naturally increase, and from cash sales dividends will be declared.

IMMIGRANTS,

BY BUYING THESE SHARES, CAN SECURE GOOD LANDS, WITH PERFECT TITLE, AT LESS THAN GOVERNMENT RATES.

For Custodians of Trust Funds, the shares of the PACIFIC LAND COMPANY combine absolute security, based on the lands, with promise of large returns, and no investment can be better for CHILDREN, as the value of the property must increase enormously in a few years.

Remittances for shares can be sent to us by Wells, Fargo & Co., or in registered letters.

Full particulars, maps and a descriptive pamphlet can be obtained at our office, where the subscription book for the shares is now open.

[illegible] sisting of Taggart, Stanley and R[illegible] themselves with guns and [illegible] dogs, started in pursuit. The [illegible] panther was seen that [illegible] dogs set on the trail. The track [illegible] the dogs took it up readily. [illegible] sufficient time for the dogs to [illegible] and a short [illegible] to a tree. [illegible] the party reached the spot [illegible] panther in the branches of a fir [illegible] by a dense thicket of [illegible] it from the ground. The [illegible] dogs had not [illegible] of the panther, [illegible] was found [illegible] with its tail, growling and spitt[illegible] One of the party fired at the [illegible] with a rifle, the ball taking [illegible] the region of the heart. With [illegible] and growl the animal [illegible] ground. The dogs [illegible] fiercely on [illegible] compelled it to fly for safety. [illegible] compelled the panther to [illegible] When about twenty [illegible] and while clinging to the trunk [illegible] second shot was fired. The [illegible] in the lower jaw, [illegible] bone, and bringing it to the [illegible] struggle then ensued [illegible] panther and the dogs. Had not [illegible] broken, it would probably [illegible] dogs. But it could only strike [illegible] its fore paws. Even with these [illegible] were severely wounded [illegible] fought with desperation, but [illegible] cut short. Fortunately the part[illegible] volvers along, which were [illegible] until both barrels were [illegible] panther ceased to breathe. [illegible] lodged in the animal's body [illegible] dead. On measuring, the [illegible] be about six feet [illegible] animal had probably [illegible] vicinity for some time [illegible] although no sheep or hogs had [illegible]

B STREET IMPROVE[illegible] who have had occasion to [illegible] street can form an idea of the [illegible] nitude of the improvement [illegible] that portion of our city. SATURDAY MORNING, JULY 12, 1873.

CITY.

A PANTHER KILLED.—On Thursday evening a large panther was shot and killed on the base line road about ten miles east of the city. About four o'clock in the afternoon, a young lady and her brother, daughter and son of a Mr. Taggert, were walking along the road in quest of blackberries, [illegible] a rustling was heard in the brush at one side of the road, and an instant [illegible] a large, full grown and ferocious panther [illegible] developed. The panther took a look at the [illegible] couple and seemed disposed to contest the right of way. Both the young lady and gentleman were not particularly struck with the an[illegible] that lingered about the countenance of the scowling beast; besides, they were in search of berries and not panthers. They concluded not to dispute with the animal about the [illegible] of the highway, but beat a hasty retreat. Situated about one hundred yards distant, was the house of Mr. Roberts, a well known [illegible] in that section. To Mr. Roberts' house they repaired with all haste, and it might [illegible] well to state that they didn't stand on the order of their going either. The animal did not try [illegible]. On arriving at the house, young Taggert [illegible] a son of Mr. Roberts and a work[illegible] Stanley, that he had just met a panther a short distance up the road. A party consisting of Taggert, Stanley and Roberts, provided [illegible] with guns and accompanied by four [illegible] in pursuit. The spot where the [illegible] was last was soon reached, and the dogs set on the trail. The track was warm and the dogs took it up readily. Fifteen minutes was [illegible] for the dogs to start the animal, and a short run compelled it to take [illegible]. In a very few minutes [illegible] the spot where they found the [illegible] in the branches of a fir tree, surrounded [illegible] of under growth, about forty feet from the ground. The chase given it by the dogs had not in anywise improved the temper of the [illegible], for it was found lashing the foliage [illegible], growling and spitting like a cat. [illegible] party fired at the enraged animal with [illegible], the ball taking effect in the breast in [illegible] the heart. With a ferocious scream and [illegible] the animal came tumbling to the [illegible]. The dogs set fiercely on the animal, and [illegible] it to fly for safety. Its disabled condition [illegible] the panther to take to a tree very [illegible] about twenty feet from the ground [illegible] clinging to the trunk of a large fir, a [illegible] was fired. The ball struck the animal [illegible] jaw, completely shattering the [illegible] and bringing it to the earth again. A [illegible] then ensued between the wounded [illegible] and the dogs. Had not the animal's jaw [illegible] it would probably have killed the [illegible] only strike and scratch with [illegible]. Even with these alone two of the [illegible] wounded. The panther [illegible] but its [illegible] was soon [illegible] the party had two re[illegible] were used effectually. Not [illegible] were nearly [illegible] did the [illegible] to breathe. Seven balls were [illegible] the animal's body before it was quite [illegible]. On measuring, the panther was found to be about six feet four inches from tip to tip. The [illegible] been prowling about in the [illegible] before it was discovered, [illegible] or hogs had been missed yet.

B [illegible] IMPROVEMENT.—Only those persons who [illegible] to take a stroll out on B [illegible] of the character and magnitude of the [illegible]ents being prosecuted in that [illegible]. Months ago the old bridge [illegible] through which Tanner's [illegible]. Along the bed of the [illegible] a cylindrical culvert [illegible] been built. This [illegible] constructed in a [illegible]. A large force of [illegible] shifting dirt from [illegible] ing it down the [illegible] B street [illegible] is to level the [illegible] grade, which has [illegible] the bridge was removed [illegible]. The brick culvert [illegible] about 80 feet under [illegible]. No opportunity will be [illegible] of the [illegible] to wash any [illegible] away, even [illegible] to ten [illegible] the winter rains. It is [illegible] brick culvert will be of [illegible] the water to escape [illegible] at all seasons [illegible] but [illegible] not carry away [illegible] and so long as the brick [illegible] at the least, will be half [illegible] under ordinary circumstances—the [illegible]. The improvement [illegible] not only embraces the bridging [illegible] gulch, but also includes the extension of the street out to the city limits, [illegible] a distance [illegible] the residence of [illegible]. Already gangs of Celestials can be [illegible] along the street, shoveling and [illegible] the earth in all directions. Several [illegible] will be opened, intersecting B street from the north. The object of such openings is to furnish [illegible] earth with which to fill up the [illegible] and bring the street up to the required [illegible]. Most of the streets to be opened will [illegible] be cut through heavy grades, and thus will [illegible] immense quantities of earth. The [illegible] along B street have materially altered the appearance of things, and will probably [illegible] the removal of several houses standing [illegible] the line. In magnitude, the bridging over of [illegible], and the extension and grading of the street, will be the heaviest public improvement [illegible] by the city of Portland during the present season.

TO BE ENFORCED.—The Superintendent of [illegible] wishes us to state to the public that on and after [illegible]day, the 14th inst., Sections 3, 4, and 6, of Ordinance No. 1,157, prohibiting ob[illegible] of any nature on the streets and sidewalks of the city, will be strictly enforced, and [illegible] will be [illegible] to the proper [illegible]. This action of the Superintendent is [illegible]. The streets and walks of [illegible] to be regarded by a large number [illegible] as out lots appurtenant to their [illegible] and business houses, into which they [illegible] to deposit any and all articles of [illegible] lumber and [illegible] they may have to [illegible]. At all hours of the day and night, [illegible] on the streets and sidewalks, empty [illegible] piles of wood, wagons, and whatever can remain out of doors without being [illegible] to be stolen. These things are a [illegible] for which there is neither excuse nor [illegible]. They obstruct travel on the streets [illegible] city an indecent and filthy appearance. The streets are not made for wagon yards, [illegible] place to store old boxes and barrels. It [illegible] the determination of the Superintendent [illegible] to abate this nuisance will never [illegible] out till the streets are cleared of all [illegible]. It is going to require a little cour[illegible] bone, however, to break up a habit [illegible] followed by a large number of persons [illegible] the city so long that they will deem any [illegible] restrain them from this misuse of the [illegible] walks as an invasion of their rights.

NEARLY COMPLETED.—Work on the new dredger [illegible] just below Flanders' wharf, is nearly [illegible]. In a few days everything will be [illegible] operations, and the present stage of [illegible] the only obstacle which can delay work [illegible] of the river. The facilities for removing the obstructions to navigation possessed by the new dredger are vastly superior to those of the old [illegible], which was abandoned in the early part of the present season. Besides having superior [illegible] and appliances to operate with, the new [illegible] is so constructed that it can work to great [illegible] much deeper water. Either sand, [illegible] or logs can be removed with ease and rapidity [illegible] a depth of 45 feet of water. This advantage will enable the new dredger to commence operations earlier each season, and prosecute the work much later.

[illegible] CREWS.—The putting on of the [illegible] between Portland and Astoria necessitates the changing not only of boats, but also of [illegible]. The Stewart will leave the O. S. N. Co.'s wharf this morning for Astoria. She will be in the command of Captain Dick Hoyt, and will be manned by the present crew of the Fannie Troup. Captain Randall, of the steamer [illegible], will assume command of the Fannie Troup. The crew of the Rescue will also be transferred. [illegible] time, the Rescue will be tied up at the bone-yard.

BONDS FILED.—Mr. W. S. Caldwell, Auditor and Clerk for Portland, filed his bonds yesterday, in the sum of $25,000, for the strict and faithful [illegible]ance of the duties pertaining to that office. Successively for the sixth time Mr. Caldwell has had the honor of relieving himself by the [illegible] verdict of the City Fathers. Few are more entitled to be thus honored than Mr. Caldwell, and few officers have served the city with greater fidelity.

FIRE CLAY.—Specimens of genuine fire clay were shown us yesterday by a gentleman just in from the country. This clay was accidentally discovered several weeks ago by a Mr. J. G. Rennick, while out picking blackberries. It is within six miles of Portland, and is found in inexhaustible quantities. A small quantity was brought to the city for trial yesterday. Mr. Fisk, the assayist, placed a piece of the clay in one of his furnaces, where it remained for five consecutive hours, subjected to a white heat. The clay stood the test without showing to the slightest extent the effects of the heat, while the crucible in which the clay was placed, and made of the best quality of English fire clay, was partially melted by the intense heat. A more satisfactory test will be made of this clay, and if the second trial is of the same character as that of the first, the person who discovered the clay and owns the land on which it is located, can safely count on having a fortune assured. Genuine fire clay is extremely scarce, and is of great commercial value in this country. This is the first clay of that description which has yet been discovered in the State, so far as we have been able to ascertain.

A FINE COFFIN.—Probably the finest coffin which was ever brought to this State at any time can be seen at the undertaker's shop, corner of Washington and Second streets. It consists of an iron casket of handsome form, most elaborately mounted with silver. On each side and at the ends are handles of silver, elegantly chased and ornamented with metallic tassels. Two large plates of thick glass cover the casket, over which is fitted an iron lid. The casket is perfectly air-tight. The iron lid can be removed at pleasure without disturbing the remains or exposing them to the air, it being only intended to shield the glass in the event that the casket and contents were to be shipped. On the lid is a raised inverted torch and a beautiful wreath, all elaborately wrought in silver. The casket was brought from Cincinnati, and arrived on the last steamer.

ASSESSING PROPERTY.—Tax payers would do well to recollect that the present month is the last in which statements as to assessable property can be made out and returned to the assessor. The blanks which Mr. Dolan has been distributing among the tax-payers of the county for several months past, must all be returned to him by the last of July, or else no exemptions allowed by law will be accredited. Mr. Dolan can be found at his office on Friday and Saturday of each week, ready to receive the returns made to him, examine the filled blanks, and enter thereon the proper exemptions. By the 1st of August, the books will be closed. Upon the last Monday in that month, the Board of Equalization will meet to equalize the assessments and examine the rolls.

SAILED.—Last evening at 6 o'clock the steamship John L. Stephens sailed away for San Francisco, carrying hence the following passengers: Miss Gardner, G W Moore, Mrs Nixon, Mrs Joss and child, Clark Smith, wife and child, Chas. Miller, J. C. Moreland, Moses Myer, Mrs M A Royal and child, L H Lewis, Wm. Downie, D Morgan, Jr, J M Whitewerth, H Thielson and wife, Mrs Videan and son, Geo Whitens, Dr Applewhite, Mrs Davis, Mrs Haynes, H C Atkinson, wife and child, W B Seymour, G H Smith, M Wilzinsky, Mrs N M Freeman, A Bennett, G A Phelps, John Hurley, C M Godbold, Jos. Brittan, S Teghner, wife and child, Robert Newcomb, 13 in steerage.

VALUABLE PROPERTY.—To-day, in addition to a number of desirable lots and blocks which will be offered for sale, Mr. A. B. Richardson will sell to the highest bidder the Cosmopolitan Hotel property, situated at the southwest corner of Front and Stark streets. This valuable property is situated in the center of the city of Portland, and parties desiring to purchase valuable business property are respectfully requested to attend this sale. This hotel is now renting for $330 per month. The property will be sold in lots or in one entire parcel, at the option of the purchaser. Sale will commence at 10 o'clock A. M., at Richardson's salesroom.

TURNED OVER.—Under provisions of the new ordinance creating the office of Superintendent of Streets, Mr. A. J. Marshall, the Street Commissioner of Portland for two years past, retired from the office yesterday. His successor in office, under the new ordinance, is Mr. R. A. Habersham, who was elected a few weeks ago. Mr. Habersham has already filed his oath in the office of the County Clerk. His bond will not be filed until the passage of the ordinance fixing the amount of the [illegible]. All the books, papers, etc., connected with the office, were turned over to Mr. Habersham by Mr. Marshall.

A REAL LUXURY.—People residing in the southern portion of the city appreciate the street cars more highly as the days grow warmer. They can scarcely conceive it possible to walk down town under a boiling sun, and are wondering how in the world they they contrived to go to and from their places of business before the street railway was laid. The cost of a single glass of soda water buys two railway tickets.

CAUGHT ON FIRE.—Some sparks alighted on one of the old sheds to the rear of the American Exchange Hotel yesterday just as the steamer Oneatta reached the wharf. The roof was covered over with moss dry as tinder. The sparks readily ignited, and presently smoke and flames were seen. A timely stream of water from the hose attached to the Oneatta extinguished the embryo conflagration.

GONE UP.—The steamer Shoshone steamed up the river at a late hour last evening. This steamer will proceed to McClosky's bar, where the steamer Gov. Grover now lies grounded, having got out of the channel. The load, or a portion of it, will be transferred to the Shoshone and the Grover pulled off. Both steamers will probably return to this city this evening.

THE EXCURSION.—This evening the steamer Shoshone will leave the foot of Alder street for Oregon City with an excursion party. The Portland Brass and String Band will discourse sweet music, and the members of Multnomah Lodge I. O. G. T., will look after the comfort of the excursionists. The boat starts at 8 o'clock sharp.

GONE TO VICTORIA.—Captain Gardner, first officer of the steamer California, will start overland this morning for Victoria. He goes there to assume command of the steamer Gussie Telfair, which was launched from the ways a few days ago. Captain Gardner will, on assuming command, bring the steamer to this port.

ACQUITTED.—The case of the State vs Isaac Gale, indicted by the Grand Jury of the Circuit Court for an assault on North Wellington with a revolver a few weeks ago, came up yesterday for trial. The jury returned a verdict of acquittal after a short deliberation. The defendant was discharged and the bond exonerated.

PASSED TO SEA.—The barkentine Webfoot, which has been lying at Cementville for some days taking on lumber, passed out to sea on Thursday morning. She is bound for San Francisco.

OFF.—The large ship Middlesex is reported off the bar, and may be expected to arrive here in a few days.

THE CANBY CAMPMEETING.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

This meeting is still in progress, and will continue until Monday 15th. The attendance is quite moderate and cannot be expected to increase much until Sabbath.

It is now arranged that Rev. Geo. W. Izer, Pastor of the Taylor Street M. E. Church, in this city, will spend next Sabbath on the ground and officiate at 11 A. M., and also, perhaps, at a later hour in the day. No services of formal dedication have been held and will not be held, until the building is completed; and such service would be held only at the instance of the Conference Committee.

The disturbance alluded to by your correspondent amounts to but little, and need not occasion the slightest alarm. A peripatetic Daguerrean gallery and swing are, some distance off from the grounds, with about as much patronage as the Ark of Father Noah, twelve months before the flood. There is plenty of excellent food at the tent of Messrs. Roork and Leavitt.

This ground when fully developed will prove a most pleasant summer resort. The services are held at 8 and 11 A. M. and 3 and 7 P. M. each day.

WM. ROBERTS.

PORTLAND, July 11, 1873.

FINALLY DECIDED!

It is an old but true saying that a man is known by the books he reads and the company he keeps. This saying is illustrative of the great sewing machine war, in which nearly all of the second-class machines have played prominent parts, expending much ammunition and making forced marches attended with great loss. But our readers have not seen the name of the world-renowned GROVER & BAKER SEWING MACHINE flourished before the people in the above connection, and this dignified reserve has established the popularity of the GROVER & BAKER SEWING MACHINE, now and forever. It stands on its respectability and merits. These machines make the ELASTIC STITCH and SHUTTLE STITCH, and will be sold on installments of $10 per month. W. T. Shanahan, agent, 71 First street.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

If you want the best meats call on Reid & Vestal, at stalls 22 and 23, Central Market. You can depend on what you get there.

We copy the following from an exchange, which is important, if true: Chronic diarrhœa of long standing, also dysentery, and all similar complaints common at this season of the year, can be cured by the use (internally) of Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. We know whereof we affirm.

WHO'S AFRAID?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

Will you grant me a small space in which to answer an effusion of prejudice and ignorance which appeared in Thursday's Statesman? The editor of that paper undertakes to show that in refusing to play the College Base Ball Club of Salem at Canby, last week, the Pioneers were afraid to do so, and, to sustain himself in this proposition, makes use of statements that are unfair and false both to the College Club and the Pioneers. The following are the facts of the case, and I present them as briefly as possible:

After the second game, played here on the 2d instant, it was necessary to play the third game on neutral grounds, on a day to be agreed on by both captains. This is base ball rule as well as usage, and everybody that knows anything of base ball practice knows it. Let us see how this rule was adhered to. On Saturday, July 5th, the captain of the College nine wrote to the Pioneers as follows: "It will suit us best to play the third game Thursday, July 8th, at Salem. * * It will be impossible for us to play at any other time or place. Would like William Pratt, of Oregon City, as umpire," etc.; thus arrogating to themselves the right to set the time and place and appoint the umpire. Was this courtesy? Was this according to the rules which they, as base ball players, at least should have known if they did not? To this letter an answer was telegraphed that we could play at Oregon City on any day that suited them, but preferred to keep an umpire that had given universal satisfaction in two games, in preference to changing for one who is an old member of the College Club, and, though a perfect gentleman, hardly qualified, as we thought, for an umpire. The answer to this was:

"Won't play at Oregon City. Play at Canby. Dick Bird, umpire. (Signed) GEO. BELT."

That the Pioneers could not go to Canby on that day is a fact known by everybody who knows anything about the matter, and who hasn't got a pet nine to apologise for. Our catcher, first baseman and short stop were disabled by sprained ankles, and the second baseman was forcibly detained by business arrangements. That the Pioneers had played several times at Oregon City, knew the grounds, and had no right to ask the College Club to play there, is false. The Pioneers had played but once, and did not know the grounds. The College Club had no right to ask any Club to play at Canby, as there is no base ball ground there, and no accommodations for playing.

The Pioneers are not afraid to play the College Club nor any other Club they have yet encountered, and they ask only that those who know nothing about their affairs will have the good sense to remain silent, and not attempt to stir up strife between the Pioneers and a Club for whom they have the very highest respect as courteous gentlemen and very good players. And these facts we submit to our friends and the base ball players of the State.

A PIONEER.

A Western rural infant recently attracted the attention of a passing cow, which lowered her head and ran after the child, who began to scream. A poor, despised but noble minded dog, lying in the shade in the yard, heard the cry, rushed on the scene and held the impetuous cow by the nose until the child was rescued.

COLEMAN'S EUCALYPTUS

Dr. J. S. Coleman's Compound Extract of Eucalyptus is a preparation combining all the valuable medicinal qualities of the Eucalyptus; which is cultivated in nearly every California garden for its medicinal utility, having been the household remedy for all diseases of the KIDNEYS, BLADDER and URINARY CANAL, and SEMINAL WEAKNESS. It seems to have a direct affinity for the GENITO-URINARY ORGANS and their surroundings, and cures them by its alterative, healing and balsamic properties more effectually than any other known remedy.

It is an invaluable remedy for all diseases of the mucous and serous membranes, such as BRONCHITIS, HACKING COUGH, NAUSEA DURING PREGNANCY, DYSPEPSIA, LEUCORRHŒA, etc.

This preparation is the result of Dr. Coleman's experiments with the medicinal properties of the tree in the U.S. Marine Hospital in San Francisco, in 1871 and 1872, where he had unusual facilities for testing the various method of preparing the remedy, and its uses. It can be relied upon as certain to give the promised [illegible], and hundred of testimonials of its efficacy can be seen at his office, 405 Kearney street, San Francisco.

COLEMAN'S DOUBLE EXTRACT OF EUCALYPTUS is a powerful, yet harmless, febrifuge, and is a special preparation for the treatment of the malarious fevers of our interior valleys, and is warranted to cure any case of FEVER AND AGUE treated with it according to directions, while the baneful results of the usual Quinine and arsenical remedies for the [illegible] disease are entirely avoided.

FOR PHYSICIANS, Coleman's Fluid Extract of Eucalyptus in 1-lb bottles.

Beware of imitations, and take none but COLEMAN'S. For sale everywhere, and by HODGE, CALEF & CO., Wholesale Druggists, Portland, Sole Agents for Oregon.

Song of the Seasons.

Gaunt winter flinging flakes of snow,
Deep burdening field and wood and hill,
Dim days, dark nights, slow trailing fogs,
And bleakened air severe and chill.
And swift the seasons circling run—
And still they change till all is done.

Young spring with promise in her eyes,
And fragrant breath from dewy mouth,
And magic touches for the nooks
Of budding flowers when wind is south
And swift the seasons circling run—
And so they change till all is done.

The summer stands erect and tall,
With early sunrise for the lawn,
Thick foliaged woods and glittering seas
And loud bird chirpings in the dawn;
And swift the seasons circling run—
And so they change till all is done.

Brown autumn, quiet with ripe fruits,
And haggards stacked with harvest gold,
And fiery flushes for the leaves,
And silent cloud skies soft outrolled.
And so the seasons circling run—
And still they change till all is done

Swift speeds our life from less to more—
The child, the man, the work, the rest,
The sobering mind, the ripening soul,
Till yonder all is bright and blest
For so the seasons circling run—
And swift they change till all is done.

Yes yonder—if indeed the orb
Of life revolves 'round central light,
Forever true to central force,
And steadfast, come the balm or blight,
And so indeed the seasons run—
And that is best when all is done.

—From Chambers' Journal

BELINDA BREE.

Bel was named for her Aunt Belinda. Miss Belinda Bree came up for a week, sometimes, in the summer, to the farm. All the rest of the year she worked hard in the city. She put a good face upon it in her talk among her old neighbors. She spoke of the grand streets, the parades, Duke's balls,—for which she made dresses,—and jubilees, of which she heard afar off,—as if she were part and parcel of all Boston enterprise and magnificence. It was a great thing, truly, to live in the Hub. Honestly, she had not got over it since she came here, a raw country girl, and began her apprenticeship to its wonders and to her own trade. She could not turn a water faucet, nor light her gas, nor count the strokes of the electric fire alarm, without feeling the grandeur of having Cochituate turned on to wash her hands,—of making her one little spark of the grand illumination under which the three hills shone every night,—of dwelling within ear-shot and protection of the quietly imposing system of wires and bells that worked by lightning against a fierce element of daily danger. She was proud of policemen; she was thrilled at the sound of steam-engines thundering along the pavements; she felt as if she had a hand in it. When they fired guns upon the Common, she could only listen and look out of windows; the little boys ran and shouted for her in the streets; that is what the little boys are for. Somebody must do the running and the shouting to relieve the instincts of older and busier people, who must pretend as if they didn't care.

All this kept Miss Belinda Bree from utterly wearing out at her dull work in the great warerooms, or now and then at day's seamstressing in families. It really keeps a great many people from wearing out.

Miss Bree's work was dull. The days of her early "mantua-making" were over. Twenty years had made things very different in Boston. The "nice families" had been more quiet then; the quietest of them now cannot manage things as they did in those days; for the same reason that you cannot buy old-fashioned "wearing" goods; they are not in the market. "Sell and wear out; wear out and sell;" that is the principle of to-day. You must do as the world does, there is no other path cut through. If you travel, you must keep on night and day, or wait twenty-four hours and start in the night again. Nobody—or scarcely anybody—has a dressmaker now, in the old, cozy way, of the old, cozy sort, staying a week, looking over the wardrobes of the whole family, advising, cutting, altering, remarking, getting into ever so much household interest and history in the daily chat, and listening over daily work; sitting at the same table; linking herself in with things, spring and fall, as the leaves do with their goings and comings; or like the equinox, that in March and September shut about us with friendly curtains of rain for days, in which so much can be done in the big up stairs room with a cheerful fire, that is devoted to the rites and mysteries of scissors and needle. We were always glad, I remember, when our dress-making week fell in with the equinoctial.

But now, all poor Miss Bree's "best places" had slipped away from her, and her life had changed. People go to great outfitting stores, buy their goods, have themselves measured, and leave the whole thing to result a week afterward in a big box sent home with everything fitted and machined and finished, with the last inventions and accumulations of frills, tucks, and reduplications; and at the bottom of the box a bill tucked and reduplicated in the same modern proportions. Miss Bree had now to go out, like any other machine girl, to the warerooms; except when she took home particular hand work of button holes and trimmings, or occasionally engaged herself for two or three days to some family mother who could not pay the big bills, and who ran her own machine, cut her own basques and gores, and hired help for basting and finishing. She had almost done with even this; most people liked young help; brisker with their needles, sewing without glasses, nicer and fresher-looking to have about. Poor "Aunt Blin" overheard one man ask his wife in her dressing-room before dinner: "Why, if she must have a stitching-woman in the house, she couldn't find a more [illegible] one to look at; somebody a little [illegible] cheerful to bring to the table, instead of that old Callariper?"

Miss Bree behaved like a saint; it was not the lady's fault; she resisted the temptation to a sudden head-ache and declining her dinner, for fear of hurting the feelings of her employer, who had always been kind to her; she would not let her suspect or be afraid that the speech had come to her ears; she smoothed her thin old hair, took off her glasses, wiped her eyes a little, washed her hands and went down when she was called; but after that day she "left off going out to work for families." The warehouses did not pay her very well; neither there was she able to compete with the smart young seamstresses; she only got a dollar and a quarter a day, and had to lodge and feed herself; yet she kept on; it was her lot and living; she looked out at her third-story window upon the roofs and spires, listened to the fire alarms, heard the chimes of a Sunday, saw carriages roll by and well-dressed people moving to and fro, felt the thrill of the daily bustle, and was, after all, a part of this great, beautiful Boston! Strange though it seem, Miss Belinda Bree was content.

Content enough to tell charming stories of it, up in the country, to her niece Bel, when she was questioned by her. Of her room all to herself, so warm in winter, with a red carpet (given her by the very Mrs. "Callariper," who could not help a misgiving, after all, that Miss Bree's vocation had been ended with that wretched word,) and a coal-stove, and a big, splendid, brindled gray cat—Bartholomew—lying before it; of her snug little housekeeping, with kindlings in the closet-drawer, and milk-jug out on the stone window-sill; of the music-mistress who had the room below, and who came up sometimes and sat an hour with her, and took her cat when she came away, leaving in return, in her own absences, her great English ivy with Miss Bree. Of the landlady who lived in the basement, and asked them all down, now and then, to play a game of cassino, or double cribbage, and eat a Welsh rabbit; of things outside that young people did,—the girls at the warerooms and their friends. Of Peck's cheap concerts and the public library books read on holidays and Sundays; of ten-cent trips down the harbor, to see the surf on Nantucket beach; of the brilliant streets and shops; of the public garden, the flowers and the pond, the boats and the bridge; of the great bronze Washington reared up on his horse against the evening sky; of the deep, quiet old avenues of the Common; of the balloons and the fireworks on the "Fourth of Julies." I do not think she did it to entice her; I do not think it occurred to her that she was putting anything into Bel's head; but when Bel all at once declared that she meant to go to Boston herself and seek her fortune,—do machine-work or something,—Aunt Blin felt a sudden thankful delight, and got a glimpse of a possible cheerfulness coming to herself that she had never dreamed of. If it was pleasant to tell over these scraps of her small, husbanded enjoyments to Bel, what would it be to have her there, to share and make and enlarge them? To bring young girls home sometimes for a chat, or even a cup of tea, to fetch books from the library, and read them aloud of a winter's evening, while she stitched on by the gas-light with her glasses on her little homely old nose? The little nose radiated the concentrated delight of the whole diminutive, withered face, the intense gleam of the small, pale blue eyes that bent themselves together to a short focus above it, and the eagerness of the thin, shrunken lips that pursed themselves upward with an expression that was keener than a smile. Bel laughed, and said she was "all puckered up into one little admiration point!"

"I'll take you right in with me, and look after you, if you do!" said Miss Bree. "And two together, we can housekeep reel comfortable."

It was as if a new wave of youth, from the far-retreated tide, had swept back upon the beach sands of her life, to spend its sparkle and its music upon the sad, dry level. Every little pebble of circumstance took new color under its touch. Something belonging to her was still young, strong, hopeful. Bel would be a brightness in the whole old place. The middle-aged music mistress would like her—perhaps even give her some fragmentary instruction in the clippings of her time. Mrs. Phimminy, the landlady—old Mr. Sparrow, the watchmaker, who went up and down stairs to and from his nest under the eaves—the milliner in the second-floor back—why, she would make friends with them, like the sunshine! There would be singing in the house! The middle-aged music mistress did not sing—only played. And this would be her doing, her bringing; it would be the third-floor-front's glory! The pert girls at the wareroom would not snub the old maid any more, and shove her into the meanest corner. She had got a piece of girlhood of her own again. Let them just see Bel Bree—that was all! Yet she did set before Bel, conscientiously, the difference between the free country home and the close, bricked up city.

"There isn't any out-doors there, you know—round the houses; home out-doors, you have to be dressed up and go somewhere, when you go out. The streets are splendid, and there's lots to look at; but they're only made to get through, you know, after all."

They were sitting, while she spoke, on a flat stone out under the old elm trees between the "fore-yard" and the barn. Up above was a great blue depth into which you could look through the delicate stems and flickering leaves of young far tips of branches. One little white cloud was shining down upon them as it floated in the sun. Away off swelled billowy tops of hills, one behind another, making you feel how big the world was. That was what Bel had been saying.

"You feel so as long as you stay here," replied Miss Blin, "as if there was room and chance for everything 'over the hills and far away.' But in the city it all crowds up together; it gets just as close as it can, and everybody is after the same chances. 'Tain't all Fourth of July; you mustn't think it. Milk's ten cents a quart, and just as blue! Don't you 'spose you're better off up here, after all? Do you think Mrs. Bree could get along without you now?"

Bel replied most irrelevantly. She sat watching the fowls scratching around the barn door.

"How different a rooster scratches from a hen!" said she. "He just gives one kick,—out smart,—and picks up what he's after; she makes ever so many little scrabbles, and half the time concludes it ain't there!—What was it you were saying? About mother? O, she don't want me! The trouble is, Aunt Blin, we two don't want each other, and never did."

She picked up a straw and bent it back and forth, absently, into little bits, until it broke. Her lips curled tremulously, and her bright eyes were sad.

Miss Blin knew it perfectly well without being told; but she wouldn't have pretended that she did, for all the world.

"O, tut!" said she. "You get along well enough. You feel well enough. You like one another full as well as could be expected, only you ain't constituted similar, that's all. She's great for turning off, and going ahead, and she ain't got much patience. Such folks never has. You can't be smart and easy-going too. 'Taint possible. She's right-up-an'-comin', and she expects everybody else to be. But you like her, Bel; you know you do. You ain't goin' away for that. I won't have it that you are."

"I like her—yes;" said Bel, slowly. "I know she's smart. I mean to like her. I do it on purpose. But I don't love her, with a can't help it, you see. I feel as if I ought to; I want to have my heart go out to her; but it keeps coming back again. I could be happy with you, Aunt Blin, on your up-stairs room, with the blue milk out in the window-sill. There'd be room enough for us; but this whole farm isn't comfortable enough for me and me!"

After that, Miss Blin only said that she would speak to Kellup; meaning her brother, Caleb Bree.

Caleb Bree was just the sort of man that by divine compensation marries, or gets married by a woman that is "right-up-an'-acomin." He "had no objections" to this plan of Bel's, I mean; perhaps his favorite phrase would have expressed his strongest feeling in the crisis just referred to, also; it was a normal state of mind with him; he had gone through the world, thus far, on the principle of not "having objections." He had none now, "if ma'am hadn't, and Blin saw best." He let his child go out from his house down into the great, unknown, struggling, hustling, devouring city without much thought or inquiry. It settled that point in his family. "Bel had gone to Boston to be a dressmaker, 'long of her Aunt Blindy," was what he had to say to his neighbors. It sounded natural and satisfactory. Mrs. Bree had her own two children,—and there might be more—that would claim all that could be done for them. She would miss Bel's telling them stories, and washing their faces, and carrying them off into the barn or the orchard, and leaving the house quiet of a Sunday or a busy baking-day. It had been "all Bel was good for;" and it had been more than Mrs. Bree had appreciated at the time. Bel cried when she kissed them good-by; but she was gone; she and her round leather trunk and her little bird in its cage that she could not leave behind, though Aunt Blin did say that "she wouldn't altogether answer for it with Bartholomew."

Bel herself,—the other little bird,—who had never tried her wings, or been shut up in strange places with fierce, prowling creatures,—she could answer for her, she thought!

It is worth telling,—the advent of Bel and her bird in the up-stairs room in Leicester place. Miss Blin believed much in her cat with the apostolic name, though she had never tried his principles with a caged bird. She had tutored him to refrain from meat and milk unless they were set down before him in his especial corner upon the hearth. He took his airings on the window-ledge where the sun slanted in of a morning, beside the very brown parcel in which was wrapped the mutton-chop for dinner; he never touched the cheese upon the table, though he knew the word "cheese" as well as if he could spell it, and would stand up tall on his hind-paws to receive his morsel when he was told, even in a whisper, and without a movement, that he might come and have some. He preferred his milk condensed in this way; he got very little of it in the fluid form, and did not think very highly of it when he did. He knew what was good, Aunt Blin said. He understood conversation,—especially moral lectures and admonitions; Miss Bree had had talked to him precisely as if he had a soul, for five years. He knew when she was coming back at 1 o'clock to dinner, or at 9 in the evening, by the ringing of the bells. After she had told him so, he would be sitting at the door, watching for its opening, from the instant of their first sound until she came up-stairs.

Bel was charmed with Aunt Blin's room, when she opened the blinds and drew up the colored shades, and let the street-light in until she could find her matches and light the gas. It was after dark when they reached Leicester place. The little lamp-lighter ran down out of the court with his ladder as they turned in. There were two bright lanterns whose flames flared in the wind; one just opposite their windows, and one below at the livery stable. There was a big livery stable at the bottom of the court, built right across the end; and there was litter about the doors and horse odor in the air. But that is not the very worst kind of city smell that might be, and, putting up with that, the people who lived in Leicester court had great counterbalancing advantages. There was only one side to the place, and though the street way was very narrow, the opposite walls shut in the grounds of a public building, where there were trees and grass, and above which there was really a chance at the sky. Further along, at the corner, loomed the eight stories of an apartment hotel. All up and down this great structure, and up and down the little three-storied fronts of the court as well, the whole place was gay with illumination, for these last were nearly all lodging houses, and at night at least looked brilliant and grand, certainly to Bel Bree's eyes, seeing three-storied houses and gas-lights for the first time. Inside, at number eight, the one little gas jet revealed presently just what Aunt Blin had told about; the scarlet and black three-ply carpet in a really handsome pattern of raised leaves, the round table in the middle with a red cloth, and the square one in the corner with a brown linen one; the little parlor beauty stove, with a boiler atop and an oven inside—an oval braided mat before it, and a mantel shelf above with some vases and books upon it—all the books, some dozen in number, that Aunt Blin had ever owned in the whole course of her life. One of the blue vases had a piece broken out of its edge, but that was turned round behind. The closets, one on each side of the fire-place, answered for pantry, china closet, storeroom, wardrobe and all. The refrigerator was out on the stone window sill on the east side. The room had corner windows, the house standing at the head of a little paved alley that ran down to Hero street.—From "The Other Girls."

While all business men, or nearly so, agree on the point that the supply of circulating medium is quite sufficient in our local market for all legitimate business, the dullness of trade precludes the possibility of its profitable employment at the current rates of discount. So we see that a scarcity of money is not one of the absolute essentials of dull times; but such times may come upon a community possessing abundant capital when the wheels of commerce are clogged by a combination of circumstances that check the ordinary course of trade and shut up the sources of living profits. In short, if money bears too high a rate for use, or such a rate as its employment in legitimate business will not justify, it is easily seen how we can have plenty of money and dull times. But one consolation under such a state of affairs is found in the fact that sooner or later the evil brings its own remedy, money being like other commodities and the price for its use regulates the law of supply and demand; so that dullness of trade lessening the call for cash the price of cash comes down and imparting a portion of its buoyancy to general commerce, everything is revived.

TO THE UNFORTUNATE.

NEW REMEDIES, NEW REMEDIES

Dr. Gibbon's Dispensary,

623 KEARNEY STREET, NEAR COMMERCIAL, San Francisco. Established in 1854, for the treatment of Sexual and Seminal Diseases, such as Gonorrhoea, Gleet, Stricture, Syphilis in all its forms, Seminal Weakness, Impotency, etc. Skin Diseases (of years standing) and Ulcerated Legs [illegible] fully treated.

DR. GIBBON has the pleasure of announcing that he has returned from visiting the principal Hospitals of Europe, and has resumed practice at his Dispensary, 623 Kearny street, corner of Commercial, San Francisco, where his old patients and those requiring his services may find him.

The Doctor has spared neither time nor money in seeking out new remedies, and has returned with increased facilities for the alleviation of human suffering.

Horrible Diseases.

How many thousands of persons, both male and female, are there who are suffering out a miserable existence from the effects of secret indulgences, or from virus absorbed into the system! Look at their pallid, emaciated and disfigured faces and their broken-down constitutions, disqualifying them for the happiness of marriage or the enjoyment of life. In this horrid situation thousands suffer until death closes the scene. Let parents, guardians, friends, attend to those who are suffering with any of those horrible, life-destroying maladies; see that they are cared for and cured before it be too late. Send them immediately to DR. GIBBON, a physician who has made private diseases his especial study for years, and who is certain to cure the most inveterate case, without mercury or any injurious drugs. It is important to those who are afflicted, or to those who are interested in the welfare of their friends, to be careful of the many pretended doctors who infest all cities, publishing their skill in curing all diseases in a few days, imposing upon the public by using the names of eminent physicians from Europe and other places. Be therefore careful and make strict inquiry, or you may fall into the hands of these charlatans.

Seminal Weakness.

Seminal Emissions, the consequence of self-abuse. This solitary vice, or depraved sexual indulgence, is practiced by the youth of both sexes to an almost unlimited extent, producing with unerring certainty, the following train of morbid symptoms, unless combatted by scientific medical measures, viz: Sallow countenance dark spots under the eyes, pain in the head, ringing in the ears, noise like the rustling of leaves and rattling of chariots, uneasiness about the loins, weakness of the limbs, confused vision, blunted intellect, loss of confidence, diffidence in approaching strangers, a dislike to form new acquaintances, disposition to shun society, loss of memory, hectic flushes, pimples and various eruptions about the face, furred tongue, fetid breath, coughs, consumption, night sweats, monomania and frequent insanity. If relief be not obtained, should apply immediately, either in person or by letter, and have a cure effected by his new and scientific mode of treating this disease, which never fails of effecting a quick and radical cure. Dr. G. will give One Hundred Dollars to any person who will prove satisfactorily to him that he was cured of this complaint by either of the San Francisco quacks.

MARRIED MEN,

Or those who contemplate marriage, who are suffering under any of these fearful maladies, should not forget the secret responsibility resting upon them nor delay to obtain immediate relief.

DOCTOR GIBBON is responsible, and will give to the patient a written instrument, binding himself to effect a radical and permanent cure, or make no charge.

CURED AT HOME

Patients at a distance may be CURED AT HOME, by writing a letter to Dr. Gibbon, stating case, symptoms, length of time the disease has continued, and have medicines promptly forwarded, free from damage and curiosity, to any part of the country, with full and plain directions. By inclosing Ten Dollars coin, in a registered letter through the Post Office or through Wells, Fargo & Co., a package of medicine will be forwarded to any part of the Union.

All communications strictly confidential.

Caution to the Unfortunate

Beware of the San Francisco quacks and [illegible] who, with bogus swindling certificates, dupe the [illegible] Some of the self-styled doctors, whose names are to be found in the daily and weekly newspapers of San Francisco and other places, are [illegible] and [illegible] too lazy to work at their trade. Some are tin [illegible] makers, newspaper carriers, intelligence office keepers, etc. The only way to avoid imposition is to inquiry—it will cost you nothing, and may save you money; for, as advertising physicians in eight cases out of ten are bogus, there is no safety in trusting any of them until you know who and what they are. Dr. Gibbon does not deceive people by exhibiting bogus titles, certificates, pretended patients' letters, etc. Dr. Gibbon will satisfy persons who may call at his office of his ability to be all that is proper to cure.

Address DR. J. F. GIBBON, 623 Kearney street, corner Commercial, San Francisco, Post Office Box 1,957.

REMEMBER TO PUT BOX 1,957 ON THE LETTER.

Consultations FREE.
